TWENTY THOUSAND DIE AS EARTHQUAKE RUINS FRONTIER CITY

The worst earthquake to occur in India during the present century has wiped out the frontier city of Quetta, in British Baluchistan, and caused the deaths of more than 20,000 people, including several members of the British Royal Air Force. The violent shocks lasted sixty seconds, but when they passed the countryside lay in ruins for more than 100 miles. At the top right is a map of India showing the area affected (see circle), while at the top right is a picture of the last earthquake area at Muzaffargarh City in Northern India, where 8,000 people lost their lives. Below is a marvelous infrared photo of the coast of Baluchistan which gives a striking view of the rock formation of the mountains rising over an area three hundred miles in length.

HOME FLEET TURNS OLD RIVER THAMES INTO WARSHIP BASE

The arrival of the ships of the Home Fleet in the River Thames to celebrate the Silver Jubilee of the King's accession to the throne provided a great attraction for Londoners and other visitors to South London. In the picture, taken from a pleasure steamer, the flagship, H.M.S. Nelson, is seen in the foreground, with the Rodney and Valiant behind. Strung out in a line twenty-two miles in length are the other units of the Home Fleet, which include some of the finest warships and cruisers in the world. Copyright, The Times, London.

MOVIE STARS HAVE TO WORK HARD FOR THEIR PAY

This picture demonstrates that it takes more than good looks to make a "good" movie star. Here is Grace Fields, noted Lancashire comedienne and film star, finding it difficult to "Look Up and Laugh" as the firemen of the Gilling Fire Brigade turn four hoses on her outside Plumbeburgh Market. Miss Fields had to endure this ice-cold immersion so that the scene could be included in her latest film.

WHAT IS IN STORE FOR THE QUINTUPLETS?

What does the future hold for the famous Dionne quintuplets? That is the question being asked as the five baby sisters complete their first year. Will their destinies parallel those of two sets of quadruplets who live across the border. Will the Dionne babies at some time go on the stage, as have the Doyle quadruplets, below of Hollywood, shown playing bridge "behind the scenes"? And will they attain the physical perfection of the Kays sisters, top of Hollis, Oklahoma, who have reached their twentieth birthday and are now college co-eds?

WHEN VANCOUVER'S STRIKERS "SEIZED" PUBLIC LIBRARY

Faithfully refusing to return to the Dominion government relief camps and demanding that Vancouver provide relief for them, 1,200 relief camp "strikers" caused the Vancouver police a good deal of trouble. Following a nuisance parade through his department stores during which three special constables were attacked, they forced their way into the Vancouver public library. Barricading the doors of the library the men stayed for several hours until private citizens contributed money for meals. In the photo above the men are shown hauling supplies into the building by means of a rope from an upper window. The "supplies" consisted of cigarettes, tobacco and candy. Note the sign, "We DEMAND relief."

What One Girl Wore:

By Betty Brownlee

It being so definitely a suit year, even sport clothes have yielded to the influence and appear in the guise of smart tailors. Gray is a popular color for this type of costume and bright colored blouses worn with neutral toned jackets and skirts are the newer craze.

Bright greens and canary yellow are shades which have found particular favor in blouses to accompany the new sports suits, and accessories usually match the blouse. Shirts abound in tricky lace, scarves and gloves in these light new colors so it's easy to assemble a costume which shows ingenuity and smartness.

The sports suits in neutral shades have another decided advantage in that changes of blouses or sweaters to be worn with the jackets and skirts elaborate the wardrobe at little cost.

Light weight wools and flannels predominate in the range of materials for sports suits, whether in the neutral tones or in white, and, of course, the popular jersey still occupies its important position in the field.

Today we illustrate a suit typical of the trend. It is one of the smart gray flannel ones, smartly tailored and worn with a bright green blouse and accessories.

The sport skirt, with its kick pleats is cut on lines which allow comfort in walking. Though straight-lined, these details give a slight flare to the bottom.

The jacket features natty cuffs and smart pockets with a double cuff on them. Tightly belted, its tailoring smacks of the mannish type of suit. Two inverted pleats at the back of the coat carry out the same idea.

The blouse is in crepe and features short sleeves with an inverted pleat in the sleeve just above a tight cuff.

Interesting stitching on the Peter Pan collar, a little bow at the neckline and buttons down the front make it the ideal blouse for this type of suit. A bright green felt hat with matching gloves completes the picture of a perfect summer sports costume.

BOOK TALK

The King's Grace by John Buchan.

This is neither a novel nor a historical text book, but the story of the events of the past five and twenty years. It is an interesting story and an amazing one. A story of chaos and destruction, coming suddenly upon a world that appeared prosperous and safe, of marvelous inventions and great achievements.

Through this there moves the quiet figure of the King. The monarch who with great tact steps into the breach and asserts his authority only when it is absolutely needed, and the man who in times of trouble and distress listens and suffers with his people.

Mr. Buchan shows great fairness in his review of events and persons. Throughout he gives both sides and sometimes—as in the Great War—the many sides of each problem.

Everyone should read "The King's Grace" and I have no doubt that it will appeal both to those who remember the King's accession and to those who have grown up during the past 25 years.
